BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Francis Murray Wilson was born in Platte County, Missouri, on June 13, 1867. His family was prominent in the history of the state. His father, Robert P.C. Wilson, lawyer, served as U.S. Congressman from Missouri from 1889-1893. His mother was Caroline F. Murray. Francis Wilson's grandfather, John Wilson, served Missouri as a pioneer lawyer.

After growing to boyhood in Platte County, Francis graduated from Vanderbilt University and Centre College. Returning to Platte County, he read law in his father's office and worked in Kansas City as a stenographer for Pratt, McCreary and Perry. He started practicing law in 1889 at the age of 29. He served as city attorney of Platte County from 1894-1898, and in 1899, he was appointed Missouri State Senator to fill an unexpired term.

He married Ida Elizabeth Cockrell on September 22, 1903. In 1904, he ran for U.S. Representative from the Fourth Missouri District. He was defeated by his Republican opponent. In 1908, Wilson ran for State Senator and won, being re-elected twice. In 1913, he resigned the office in order to accept the position as U.S. District Attorney, Western District of Missouri. He was reappointed by President Wilson in 1917, and remained District Attorney until 1920. That same year, Wilson resigned to accept the position as one of the two receivers of the bankrupt Kansas City Railway Company. After returning the company to solvency, he terminated his position in 1926 when a new company, the Kansas City Public Service Company was formed.

In 1928, Wilson ran for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He defeated his principal opponent, Alfred L. McCauley, but was defeated in November by Henry S. Caulfield. In 1932, he again ran for Governor in the Democratic primary, defeating Russell Dearmont. On October 12, 1932, less than a month before the election, Wilson suddenly died of a stomach and intestinal disorder which had weakened him over the course of several years.
