Introduction

9 cu. ft. (8 cu. ft. boxes + 3 oversize boxes)

The Louisa P. Johnston (1890-1979) Papers, K0650, document the life and family history of Johnston, a great-granddaughter of Alexander Majors, as well as the history of the Alexanders Majors House. Majors was a founder of the Russell, Majors and Waddell freighting firm of Kansas City, credited with expanding westward development in the United States in the 1850s and 1860s, and creating the Pony Express. Louisa P. Johnston spent nearly fifty years of her life working to preserve the Alexander Majors House on State Line Road as a historic site, and educating the Kansas City community about Majors' historical significance.

Biographical / Historical Sketch

Louisa P. Johnston was born in 1890, one of four children of William B. and Susan Simpson Johnston of Kansas City, Missouri. She and her brothers Joseph and Robert attended schools in the Kansas City area. In the 1920s, she lived and worked for five years as the registrar at Mills College, a liberal arts women's college in Oakland, California. She later returned to the Kansas City area and taught typing and stenography or shorthand at East High School. She purchased the Majors home in the 1930s.

In the mid-1940s, legislation was presented to the U.S. Congress to make the Majors home and surrounding acreage a national memorial park. The legislation did not pass. Johnston spent the subsequent decades seeking public recognition for Majors' legacy, advocating for the preservation of the home and battling encroaching development along State Line Road.

The Majors House was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in April 1970. Louisa Johnston died in March 1979. The Majors House was restored and opened to the public for tours in July 1984.

Scope and Content Note

The Louisa P. Johnston (1890-1979) Papers, K0650, include: materials on the Johnston, Simpson and Majors families; photographs and news articles of the Majors house over time; Johnston's research files, writings and correspondence concerning the Russell, Majors and Waddell firm, the Pony Express, and western history; portions of Johnston's legal, financial, and personal correspondence; personal photographs; various materials relating to Kansas City public schools, education history and women's history; various Kansas City, regional and national publications and ephemera items; and, personal and house-related artifacts. The Papers also include records of the Alexander Majors Historical Foundation, materials reflecting the evolution of the Majors home from a
