Historical Note:
The Metropolitan Educational Center in the Arts (MECA) formed in June 1967 to develop and oversee art education programs for kindergarten to grade twelve students in the St. Louis area. Representatives from the school districts of Clayton, Missouri, and Belle Valley, Illinois, conceived of the project and applied for federal grant money in 1966 to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW), who financed MECA for three years under Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. MECA served 700,000 children, sponsoring numerous art programs, including the Saturday Center Project, a program that provided weekend courses in drama, photography, and creative writing; the Architecture Workshop, a summer program that taught architecture to students as an art form; and the Dance Project, which sponsored courses in dance techniques. When federal support for MECA ceased in August 1971, Webster College took over the administration of the program.

Arrangement:

The collection consists of one folder containing the report.

Scope and Content Note:

The report is 149 pages and related to the history of the Metropolitan Educational Center in the Arts (MECA) from June 1967 to August 1970. Topics include MECA projects that stressed direct and occasional aesthetic experiences for children; workshops for educators; evaluation of MECA-sponsored programs; publicity of MECA’s projects through St. Louis area media outlets and educational journals; and the makeup of the Executive Committee that governed MECA. Also included are biographies of MECA participants and copies of MECA newsletters.
